The Intelligencer.

Ex-Secretary Bristow's Speech at Boston Friday Night. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen: To ten-der you the homage of my profound grat-itude for this demonstration is but a feeble spression of what I feel. I came to to fulfill a promise of long standng. My engagement was of a private and this expression of your confidence and friendly feeling is quite un-expected to me. But this is not the first btedness to the people of Bos ner, they gave me a proof of lence which I can never hope The indebtedness is absolute.

the most adverse circumstances, and in the face of the fiercest opposition. At e first they were content with firm and dedided opposition to a further extension of slavery on this continent. Persistent efforts and a courageous advocacy of their opinions, aided by the arrogance and excesses of their adversaries, brought them sudden and complete success. The most anguine anti-slavery man could not have hoped for it at so early a day. A blight upon the prosperity of one section of the country and a great moral wrong to all d was wiped out forever. The friends of erform should take courage from the exall ample of these brave men. The cause in which we have enlisted is in the interest of the highest good of civil government, ically united in lavor of an interest ney. I have great satisfaction in the belief that the masses of the people is country are patriotic and honest, that, however they may be deluded leceived for a time on any question ing the preservation of free instituof national faith under the which we have emission and to the highest good of civil government, and has for its purpose lasting benefit to all people. The cause may be derided and its strength be despised by the friends of the old system which we attack. So ency is estimated was the anti-slavery cause, and so were the men who devoted themselves to it.

upon each other. Capital requires a ployment, which will be found most readily in the West and South, where there remains so much to be developed by the combined power of labor and capital. These sections require the aid of theach commulated capital of the East to open mines, plant and gather crops, build cities, and in a thousand ways to develop the latent wealth of a vast and fertile part of our country. He who attempts to alienate the sections by appeals to passion or fallacious arguments on the currency question is the enemy of both sections, and should be trusted by neither. Scarcely less mischlevous, and certainly carcely less mischievous, and certain sets of the laborer and producer. throughout the country. The organised movement for reform may be said to be in its infancy. Public attention for many years past has been too much absorbed by questions of a more exciting nature to admit of a free and full discussion of this topic, which must now come. But although the organised movement for reform is of recent origin, there is much to encourage its friends to hope for ultimate and complete success, because, first of all, we know we are right. The great Republican party of the country, attis National Convention in 1876, adopted and engraficed into its platform a resolution in favor of the principle for which we contend. The first thing to be accomplished in this movement for reform is the abolition of a base of administration which has the growth of years. This was clearly seen and plainly declared by the percesentatives of the Republican party and a love which is tender and delicate can never, in speech or in writing, throw elearly seen and pinniny declared by the representatives of the Republican party at Cincinnati. They demanded a retoration of the just Constitutional cowers of the executive branch of the government. They declared that senators and Representatives in Conand a love which is tender and delicate can never, in speech or in writing, throw the coarseness of newspaper humor upor the belief of the humblest member of socie mysteries in the compass of a carelessly and flippantly written editorial, which from Paul down, have eluded the search powers of the executive branch of the government. They declared that Senators and Representatives in Congress, who may be judges and accusers, should not dictate appointments to office, and that the rule in appointments should have reference to the honesty, fidelity and capacity of the appointer, and that the chief executive of the nation, being responsible under the constitution an answerable to the representatives of the people for the proper performance of his duty in this regard, should be wholly untrammeled by the vicious practice which had hitherto prevailed. This was a blow struck at the root of the evil. It was followed by a bold, manly and clear letter of acceptance from the nominee of the convention for the high office of President, Governor Hayes. There was no lowering of the standard which had been lifted at Cincinnati. On the contrary, it was still higher advanced, and the people, who were about to make their choice between the candidates of the two great parties, were notified in the clearest and most distinct manner that, in the event of the success of the Republican candidate, every effort would be made for "thorough, radical and complete reform." Having succeeded in electing their President, the friends of reform everywhere rejoiced at the high stand taken by him in his inaugural address.

In view of these significant facts, aurely reformers have no reason to despair of final and absolute success. It should be borne in mind that we attack an ancient and deeply-rooted practice, that or ene Overtasking the Energies.

It is not advisable for any of us to overtask our energies, corporad or mental, but in the eager pursuit of wealth or fame or knowledge, how many transgress this salutary rale. It must be a matter of great importance to all who do so to know how they can regain the vigor so recklessly expended. The remedy is neither costly or difficult to obtain. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is procurable in every city, town and settlement in America, and it compensates for a drain of bodily or mental energy more effectually than any luvigorant ever prescribed or advertised. Laboring men, athleite, students, journalists, lawers, clergymen, physicians, all bear testimony to its wondrously renovating powers. It increases the capabilities for undergoing fatigue, and counteracts the injurious effects upon the system of exposure, sedentary habits, unhealthy or wearying avocations, or an insalubrious climate, and is a prime alterative, diuretic and blood depurent. ecdaw

The charge that reformers are mere doctri-naires and impractical in politics is fully met by the declaration of the Cincinnaii platform that it is entirely consistent with all we aim at, that the party in power should have "those places when harmony and vigor of administration re-quire its policy to be represented."
